

Valarie Clark, MPA, has spent her career listening, learning, and leading in public health, academic health and community and civic engagement. Recently serving as Director of Stakeholder Engagement for the over 100 national and community engagement partners in All of Us Research Program, Valarie has also held leadership positions at the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC), the National Association of County and City Health Officials and the Mayor's Office – Boston Women's Commission.

In 2019, Clark received an executive certificate in Organizational Consulting and Change Management from Georgetown University. She also holds a Master's in Public Administration from the Clark Atlanta University and a Bachelor's in Health Services Management from Virginia's Norfolk State University. She is the recipient of the AAMC Spirit of Excellence Award, the AAMC's highest honor for employee achievement, and is an active board member of Leadership Greater Washington.